One of Peter's friends invited Peter to a religious ceremony at his temple. When Peter explained that he is a Christian, his friend said, "That's OK. I'm sure we are just calling God by different names."

WHAT TRUTH SHOULD PETER TELL HIMSELF?

"What's the matter, Dad?" asked Terri. "I have a big problem at work," Dad answered. "I would pray, but things are so bad that I'm not sure that even God could help me."

WHAT TRUTH SHOULD TERRI TELL HERSELF?

Sarah's friends chatted together. "I like to think about the world starting because of a big bang," one of them said. "Yeah, but I heard life started when lightning struck the ocean at just the right time," another one said. "Imagine, we were all made completely by chance," laughed another.

WHAT TRUTH SHOULD SARAH TELL HERSELF?

"Hey, Susan, did you hear that Lindsey got hurt? She is in the hospital and will have an operation on her back." Susan answered, "Wow, I will be praying for her to get better." "Good," said Kim. "If you pray to your God and I pray to mine, I'm sure they will help Lindsey get better."

WHAT TRUTH SHOULD SUSAN TELL HERSELF?

Phil's friends wanted to watch a really gross, scary movie. Since Phil was staying with his friends overnight, he wasn't sure what to do. He was pretty sure he would have nightmares later if he watched the movie. He didn't really want to think about all those monsters, blood, and guts.

WHAT TRUTH SHOULD PHIL TELL HIMSELF?

Mike wasn't sure how he got separated from his scout group on the hike, but he couldn't see or hear them anywhere. The sun was starting to go down. Mike felt very much alone.
